INTRODUCTORY

Climatic conditions in the Pacific Northwest are now widely known as ideal for the growing of Narcissi, Tulips, bulbous Iris, Gladiolus, and sundry bulb stock. As to soil conditions, we have been very fortunate to find some of the very best in the Columbia River Valley, at Woodland, Washington, where we now have growing 90 acres of the finest stock. The growing season being considerably earlier there than in Holland, gives us the advantage that our bulbs force much earlier. The quality we have shipped the past years gives ample backing to our bold statement, that no better bulbs are produced anywhere else in the world.

The large size, heavy weight, healthy appearance and hardiness is of great value for counter trade and where forced in the greenhouse, the earliness, quantity and quality of the flowers are of outstanding merit.

Bulbs are shipped in carload lots to Eastern distributing centers and re-shipped by L. C. L. freight from there. This past season 21 carloads were so distributed from Minneapolis, Minn.; Detroit, Mich.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pa.; and New York City. We absorb the carload freight and our customers pay only the freight from their nearest distributing point.

All of the contents of this catalog are for the convenience of our patrons, to use in their publications at will.

STORAGE OF BULBS

As the quality and usefulness of bulbs may materially suffer from improper storage, some advice on this subject is here in order. All bulbs should be unpacked upon arrival and spread out thinly on shelves or trays, preferably with slatted bottoms, to provide the best possible ventilation. Where there is not much air circulation, some kind of agitators should be installed. The temperature bulbs should be kept at depends upon the various kinds and the purpose the bulbs are used for. Broadly speaking, all bulbs to be kept dormant for later use prefer a cool and dry temperature, whereas those for early forcing require a cool and moist temperature, with the exception of Gladiolus, which respond best to a two-weeks warm storage just before planting. The proper storage of bulbs means as much or more than anything else where the final flowering results are concerned. Fully realizing this, we have continuously studied this angle, and as the first results, are now supplying our customers Daffodils, Iris, Tulips and Gladiolus, which can be forced early and with excellent flower production.

HINTS FOR FORCING

A few hints for successful forcing are here in place, and we, therefore, give a summary of the experience of hundreds of our customers, what to do and what not to do.

Unpack bulbs at once upon arrival and keep in cool place until planted, 50 to 52 degrees the ideal temperature, except Gladiolus, which prefer 70 to 80 degrees, just before planting.

Plant as soon as possible, and if buried outside, select a shady place or cover with plenty of straw to keep the sun off and see to it that they keep moist and cool. Good drainage is necessary, as too much water is just as bad as too dry. That is why some of the largest bulb forcers use a bulb cellar where they can control the temperature and moisture.

When bulbs may be brought in the greenhouse depends on various conditions. The proper time for Daffodils, however, under any conditions, is as soon as the flower buds are out of the bulbs. If the flower bud is not advanced enough at the time the bulbs are brought in, there is a chance that the bud stays down and only the foliage grows up.

The approximate earliest dates when Daffodils may be brought in, are as follows:

December 1st—Pre-cooled King Alfred.

December 15th—Pre-cooled Glory of Lisse, Golden Spur, Minister Talma, Autocrat and Orange Cup.

December 20th—King Alfred; pre-cooled Sir Watkin, Spring Glory and Glory of Sassenheim.

December 26th—Golden Spur.

January 1st—Minister Talma, The Star, Glory of Lisse and Autocrat.

January 10th—Sir Watkin, Spring Glory, Poetaz Helios, Orange Cup, Laurens Koster, Poeticus Ornatus and Van Sion.

January 20th—Glory of Sassenheim, Tresserve, Queen of the North and White Lady.

February 1st—Bicolor Victoria and Emperor.

When the buds are fully set out of the neck of the bulbs, they can stand 60 degrees right from the start, otherwise a week in 50 to 52 degrees is advisable, until buds show.

Iris may be forced various ways. They may be buried outside to root and brought in any time thereafter, but before a heavy frost freezes the tops. Or they may be placed in the greenhouse right from the start. In both cases Wedgewood may be forced at 55 degrees, and even 60 degrees, if kept wet and given plenty of light, other Iris at 50 to 52 degrees. If planted in ground benches, where they get plenty of light and are kept wet with proper drainage, five degrees more does not do any harm.

Gladiolus, of course, are planted in the greenhouse. Of great importance is the spacing of the bulbs in the benches. On narrow, raised benches, a distance of twice the size of the bulb between the bulbs is the closest they may be planted, whereas on wide, raised benches and in ground benches they require more space. Good results will also depend on the amount of sunlight during the time they set the buds. It is, therefore, recommended to give them a sunny position in the greenhouse. Also varieties such as Betty Nuthall, Picardy and Los Angeles, producing a heavy growth and more than one flower spike, should be given a more liberal spacing. Temperature 50 to 52 degrees.
